Washington, May 22 .- (By Constitution Leased Wire.)-Republican leaders from all over the United States, including several ultra-administration senators, are in executive conference in Washington today and will continue it tomorrow in an effort to appraise the result of the alleged war contract scandals, with their various ramifications, in the fall elections, and to decide upon some imme diate course for the department of justice, and particularly for Attorey-General Harry M. The Daugherty situation, with the sional fight on him being abetted by sensational documentary disclosures, is most alarming to the administration. If the attorney-general emerges with his flag at the top of the mast he will be the hero of the Harding regime, but should he fail to do so, it is admitted by his closest friends that he will be more of a political liability to the president than Ballinger was to for mer President Taft. Daughter Wants Death of Father In Electric Chair

She Writes to Governor, Asking Him Not to Commute Sentence.

Michigan City, Ind., May 22 .- The plea 'of William E. Donovan's 17-year-old daughter will probably block all efforts of Donovan's friends to save him from the electric chair. Donovan is sentenced to die June 1 for the murder of his wife last summer. He shot and killed his wife as she faced him with their two-year-old baby in her arms.

Governor McCray, after receiving the daughter's letter urging that the death sentence be carried out, has intimated that he will take no further action in the case, and Donovan him-self, in the death cell at the prison here, has given up all hope. The death watch was placed on the cell Monday and prison anthorities are

We recommend that the council pass a resolution as follows:

Resolved, That council recommend to the tax assessors that no increase in general assessments shall be made for the year 1923, and that the only changes in the assessed valuations shall be such as to make for uniformity.

That the assessors begin now to prepare to assessments for the whole city on a front foot rule, but that such assessments shall not be applied prior to the year 1925, because of the impossibility of completing such system prior to that date; that during the period prior to 1923 the assessors shall provide a lot survey and map which shall give it full information as to the size, back frontage and depth of all lots. That the cousell make such provisions for survey and maps.

The only idea that the tax committee had in view was that the tax aspessors should be enabled to make a systematic and equitable assessment of all property in the city, and thinking this the best plan, the committee was of the impression that instead of raising the tax rate or increasing taxes that the rate could possibly be lowered for reduced to from 33 1-3 to 50 per cent instead of the present rate of 70 per cent. "We started very early each morning to avoid the heat of midday, and at noon we stopped and put blankets and cushions on the grass to rest upon and eat our dinner. We tried to be in some village or wayside house at Drive for Funds Monday was marked by two developments of importance that augur for the success of the American Rescue Workers' campaign for funds for a new home which will be waged in Atlanta from the 25th to the 21st of this month—the indorsement of Mayor Key and the acceptance by Mrs. B. M. Boykin, president of the Atlanta Women's club, of the chairmanship of the women's club, of the chairmanship of the women's division.

The mayor's letter, addressed to Colonel Horace Burton, head of the American Rescue Workers in Atlanta, follows:

"It is my privilege, as mayor of the city of Atlanta, to indorse the work of the American Rescue Workers in this city under your direction. The similistration of the local branch has been entirely satisfactory and you have fulfilled the expectations we had of your workers, and it is a pleasure to commend you at this time for it.

"The greatest possible attention has been given at all times to cases of destitution, in spite of your equipment and building being inadequate to the volume of work."

"In my opinion, the least our citizens could do for you would be to give your organization a building and equipment in a measure fitted to the needs. Atlanta should subscribe to the effort to raise the money that is needed to equip your institution for the increasing volume of charitable work that you are doing. I trust that you will have the fullest co-operation in your endeavor."

Mrs. Boykin consented to direct the work of the worker of the work of the wo in some village or wayside house at dusk. This was not always easy, for the houses were often many miles apart, and we were often reminded that we were far from civilization's centers.

No House in Sight.

"Once we met quite a company of men, women and children, the men all carrying guns. There was not a house in sight, but as we had passed the state of the state o house in sight, but as we had passed a little clearing a few miles back, where there was a schoolhouse or meeting house, we thought they might be going to protracted meeting and that there was a feud among them.

"As we climbed Old Scaley we met a woman on horseback, with one arm around a dasher churn, which she had probably borrowed, for in those primitive regions money was scarce and such things as were expensive were loaned from one to another, the borsuch things as were expensive were loaned from one to another, the bor-rower sometimes going long distances for her turn at the desired article, un-til, passing from one to another, it finally got around to the owner again.

that is needed to equip your institution for the increasing volume of charitable work that you are doing. I trust that you will have the fullest co-operation in your endeavor."

Mrs. Boykin consented to direct the work of the women's committee following a brief, telling address delivered at Monday afternoon's meeting of the Woman's club by Dr. J. H.

Johnston, dean of St. Philip's Episcopal cathedral and chairman of the committee on church co-operation for the campaign. Dean Johnston has been in particularly close touch with the work of the rescue workers' home on Capitol avenue and expressed the sentiment that one had only to visit the home to be convinced of the great and indispensable work that is being done there for all Atlanta.

The appeal is for $25,000, and the campaign will be waged for one week. Atlanta will gladly give this comparatively small amount. It would give it in one day, as readily as in three, if there were enough canvassers to cover the city in that time. The proof their mite. No one should deny himself the privilege of contributing his "bit" toward the support of this truly worthy work.

the shelf away back under the overhanging rock of the falis we watched the water fall in most beautiful spray. We took an all-day drive to Whitewater Falls, and though we did not find the 'creeping fern for which we sought, we saw the water slipping—slipping over the series of cascades in a frothing foam of white. We visited 'Granite City,' with its marvelous narrow alleys between high walls of rock and its wonderful counterpart of a demolished building.

"One trip especially stands out in memory when we went to Whiteside mountain and climbed high up on the mountain side and crejt out close to the precipice, that we might look down into the cove below and watch the storm there.

"But before we knew it the thick forg enveloped us and we could see nothing, not even things close by. We were in great danger then, lest we should make a misstep or lose one another. Slowly we edged backward, and then as I held fast to the skirts of my husband's coat, and the others behind held on to each others' clothes, the little procession proceeded along with hardly any houses, but we rested near the lovely spring of cool water which flows there now. When we got to Flowery Branch Mr. Smith tried to coax the blacksmith to shoe poor Bob, but he positively refused, because he was afriad Bob would fall over on him. MENTION OF FORD IS CHEER-BRINGER

Ford interested in the development of agricultural chemistry, which holds forth such promise of immediate return. It is now time to get a master mind, with unlimited resources, directed toward agricultural pursuits and the gigantic resources lying dormant here have met their match in that great industrial leader, Henry Ford. The public must receive the benefit of the government's investment at Muscle Shoals, not through government operation but through some liberal arrangement with private capital, whereby the public is insured adequate returns in time of peace and maximum protection in event of war." Ford interested in the development of

"It is with much regret that I am anable to be with you on occasi unable to be with you on occasion of your national meeting at Muscle Shoals. We are still awaiting the final action of congress and will be ready to proceed as soon as they say the word."

Enthusiasm among the delegates and visitors ran high at every mention of Ford's name.

The audience shouted for several minutes when former Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia, declared that he "had reached the cold-blooded conclusion that the bid of Ford would better serve the people than all the other proposals put together." Mr. Smith referred to Muscle Shoals as a "national asset" and asserted that "if a power site of such potentiality had existed in New England, in the middle Atlantic states. Ohio or Illinois, the gray haired men here would have been babies when the development started." The Georgian said the power interests "and the fertilizer interests" didn't want Ford to have Muscle Shoals.

"And it is interesting to note," continued Mr. Smith, "that the manufacturers of automobiles are afraid of Henry Ford." Mr. Smith offered the opinion that a strong company should operate Muscle Shoals, but he said,
"I had rather see Henry Ford starthat company than anybody else."

Declaring that it was now time for Alabams to take her place in a commercial and industrial sense in the minds of the nation in place of only an alphabetical postion, Harry T.
Hartwell, city commissioner of Mobile, urged delegates to support locat and national legislation looking to port improvement at Mobile and development of Muscle Shoals. "We are thinking in the future." said Mr.
Hartwell. "We want added terminals at Mobile; we are urging congress to pass the ship subsidy bill; we are demanding that Henry Ford be permitted to develop Muscle Shoals."

A PUBLIC OUTRAGE.

The bombing of the home of Mayor Dimon, of Columbus, under cover of darkness, early last Sunday morning, was not only an assault upon law and order in that city, but a public outrage against the entire state of Georgia.

The disgraceful bombing episode followed a recent physical attack upon the city manager of Columbus and repeated anonymous threats that the lives of the mayor and the members of his family would pay the penalty of a steadfast refusal on the part of the governing body of the city to yield to a persistent demand by a disgruntled element of the community that the fice, but the identity of the actual perpetrator or perpetrators of the fiendish act is not definitely estab-

As to the merits of the city mana ger form of government, or the fit board of commissioners of Columbus, all of that is beside the mark in this connection.

All that is now confronting the ace authorities and decent public sentiment of Columbus, Muscogee county, and the state of Georgia in their consideration of this incident. is the fact that a revolting and bia, contemplates nothing more nor cowardly attempt at murder was less than the extension of the priv made by a criminal or a group of criminals employing methods that hub of American democracy, has have no place in the scheme of never had a voice in its own govcivilization.

This is nothing more nor less than a dastardly attempt at government by intimidation, violence, blood and iron.

It is anarchy and nihilism, pure and simple, and whoever is guilty of that barbaric effort to override the will of the majority of the down orderly and legal government in that city by destroying the life and the household and the property of an official who holds his commission by virtue of the suffrage of his fellow citizens, should be made to pay!

It is to be hoped that the outraged city, county and state in which the crime was committed will spare no expense in seeing that the fullest measure of justice is applied in this case. For if a crime like that, in the very heart of an enlightened, progressive Georgia city, is allowed to go unpunished, the inevitable effect will be to weaken the very structure of democratic government everywhere in Georgia.

THE "PROMISED LAND." Jews of Atlanta, affiliated with he international organization of Keren Hayesod, formed for the purpose of restoring Palestine as a Jewish homeland, are to conduct a campaign this week, in unison with a nationwide campaign, to raise oney necessary in the work of redeveloping the once fertile land of Canaan.

The money-raising effort this week might be called a drive to end drives, at least so far as the relief of Jewish war sufferers in Eastern

These thousands of people have been made, through no fault of their own, in-

It is the purpose of the campaign this week to procure the funds necessary for carrying out irrigation projects, supplying agricultural out of place as a sharp-tongued machinery and implements, building temporary dormitories, and otherwise providing for the first needs of the pioneers from destitute Russia and Poland who are to invade the "Promised Land" again after many centuries of absence and to make it again a land flow ing with milk and honey.

The British government holds the mandate of the league of nations for the territory, which was wrested by British troops from the hands of the Turks. The government is in sympathy with the movement and its high commissioner in Palestine is supplying the utmost in governmental cooperation. This is the first time in more than a thousand years that political conditions have made the restoration of the conditions and the conditions have made the conditions and the conditions are conditionally as the conditional conditions are conditionally as the conditional conditional conditions are conditionally as the conditional cond Palestine possible.

It is not probable that the resto ration of Palestine will attract Jews in America, western Europe and other liberal and well-governed lands. The American Jew is content with the "Promised Land" he has found. This measure provides simply that the people of Washington and the desire to aid in its advancement the District of Columbia shall have in such small measure as I possibly the right to elect a representative to serve them in the national house: and it ought to become law, as reports say it probably will. In fact, its scope might well h extended so as to give the residents of the capital the full rights of selfvoters of Columbus and to break government that are enjoyed by other American communities

They have no voice even in the selection of the man who appoints their governor.

In effect, Washington and th District of Columbia constitute an utocracy at the very seat of a national government that is founded on the principle of government 'by and with the consent of the kov srned!"

There is no valid reason why the people of the capital should not enjoy all of the rights of Amer san citizenship; and it is to be soped not only that this bill will h enacted, but that its enactment wil be followed by other laws extend ng still further the citizenship privileges of the people of the cap-

Proposes Stores Along Sides of New Viaduct

Editor Constitution: Having the highest regard for Atlanta and having may, I take the liberty of suggesting what to my mind would be of considerable improvement to the beauty, safety and incidentally, income value of the proposed viaduo over the railroad tracks. The suggestion in the rough, is, to extend on both sides and the entire length of the viaduct, beams of approximately 18 feet and construct thereon stores of one story, with architecturally attractive fronts.

The advantages to the present

The advantages to the present plan, would be:
Enhanced beauty, obscuring the railroad yards, and partly eliminating the smoke nuisance.
Increased safety, by reason of the activity of business in the stores during both day and night removing to a very large degree opportunity for hold-ups and giving a feeling of security to pedestrians.

hold-ups and giving a feeling of se-curity to pedestrians.

Increased value, by reason of the vast income from rentals of the stores, affording ample funds for mainten-ance and adequate patroling.

The lengthy viaducts of Chicago have always been notoriously unsafe, the very railroad and yards making the easiest avenue for escape of bandifs.

It would be very gratifying to n if through you such could be effected.

A QUICK CURE FOR IVY POISONING.

Speaking from personal experience, should say that having a gangrenous appendix removed is a pleasant pas-time as compared with having the seven-year itch for three days, and I'd rather have a complication of these trifling afflictions than a mild attack of ivy dermatitis. The maddening about last summer's ivy poisoning is that the discovery of the quick cure for this catastrophe was an-nounced only when the last temper destroying symptoms were disappear-

Dr. Albert Strickler reports in The Journal of the American Medical as-sociation that injections of minute doses of the toxin of poison ity into the muscles of a person suffering with the muscles of a person suffering with a severe attack of ivy dermatitis brings relief to the sufferer within a few hours and cure within two or three days. This is certainly a gratifying discovery, for under ordinary treatment such an attack generally lasts some weeks and there is a pronounced tendency toward relapse and few sufferers escape without some secondary tendency toward relapse and few sufferers escape without some secondary infection from scratching or careless handling. In some cases of ivy poisoning the victims make a fairly prompt and complete recovery under ordinary treatment, and then develop some obstinate skin trouble which persists for menths and years.

It is Dr. Strickler's practice to question patients as to whether they have been exposed to poison ivy or poison.

been exposed to poison ivy or poison sugain or both, and to use the toxin of one or both, according to the an-swer. If there is uncertainty, he uses both toxins, a mixture of two-thirds of my toxin and one-third of umac toxin. From seven to dose usually given, each 24 hours for two days, as a rule though sometimes the dose must be repeated daily for three or four days. Usually two injec-tions are all that is needed. The itchrelieved within 24 hours after the first injection. Doesn't that sound fine? It does if you've had it. At the time of the report Strickler had treat-ed 30 sufferers with this method, without any local applications or other treatment, and with a quick cure in

The toxin is prepared by the pharmacist, chemist or laboratory expert by extracting the fresh leaves of the poison ivy or of poison sumae with absolute alcohol, filtering and precripitating. Mr. Goodwyn, who is state traffic manager for the L. & N. railroad, testified on behalf of the carriers, and outlined a proposed system for the fixing of rates in the territory. Hi proposal embraces the following:

1. A mileage system, as the roc bottom foundation of all rate fixing. 2. A fixed definite percentage lationship betwene class rates, which will mean that every railroad will be called upon to completely change its present system of rates.

3. Application of class rates in all

4. A general compliance with the section which provides no higher rates for shorter distances than for long distances.

Business Man Writes of Marvelous Improvement Through Treatment by Atlanta Chiro-

The following voluntary letter, se-ceived by Dr. A. Malcolm William-son, well-known chiropractor, with of-fices in the Grand Theater building, from a prominent business man, who was in Atlanta for a short time, ex-plains itself:

"May 15, 1922. "Dear Dr. Williamson:

"Dear Dr. Williamson:

"Just a line to tell you how much Mrs. Dawson and I appreciate the help you have given us by your treatment. When we first called upon you early in April we both had a very poor opinion of all chiropractic doctors, but thought we would just give you a trial as a last chance, or forlorn hope. You have taught us to highly respect your school, and to place you personally upon a very high plane of efficiency.

"I was suffering from a bad case of general breakdown and asthma, which had baffled the skill of several eminent specialists in both London and New York. You, with only 30 treatments, have made a marvelous improvement, and I am sure that if I could remain here a little longer that you would effect a complete cure.

"Mrs. Dawson had entirely lost the sense of smell for over 22 years, had not been able to smell anything. Specialists said the nerve was paralyzed, and that she would never smell again. Yet with three adjustments you restored the nerve and she could smell.

"Words fail me in attempting to express our thanks, but Mrs. Dawson and I will hereafter be strong advocates for your school, and will ever remember with grateful hearts all that you have done for us. Wishing you every success, and again thanking you, I remain.

"Yours sincerely,

Lesson No. 49. The Storage Battery as a Source of Filament Current.

When the filament of a vacuum tube is heated by an electric current, there is an emission of electrons or small charges of negative electricity. Up to a certain point the increase in current through the filament causes an increase in temperature and consequently an increase in the electron flow, but an excessive amount of current will result in burning out the filament and the consequent destruction of the valuable properties of the tube in the detection and amplification of niversary Meeting of the valuable properties at the state of the electric waves.

A storage of "A" battery, as it is commonly known when used as a source of filament current, is usually a 6-volt battery of the lead plate-sulphuric acid type and is provided with a variable resistance for regulation.

The capacity of this battery may vary from 36 to 100 ampere hours. the ampere hour being a unit denoting the flow of one ampere through a circuit for one hour. Owing to the fact that the vacuum tube when used in a receiving circuit requires only a small amount of current, a fully charged battery will supply current for a considerable period. The amount of current differs for various types of tubes and has range from 0.2 to 1.5 amperes, the proper value being recorded on the container in which the tube is purchased.

The 6-volt battery consists of three cells connected in series, that is, the positive terminal of one cell is connected to the negative terminal of the next cell, with the result that the total voltage of the battery is the sum of the voltage of the individual cells. In this type of battery lead plates are supported in a dilute solution of sulphuric acid and when current from an external source is forced through the plates and solution, a change takes place in the plates and the battery stores up a supply of chemical energy. When the battery is connected to the filament, this chemical energy is released in the form of electric current. When fully charged and on open circuit, the voltage of the lead cell is slightly over two volts. Current may be drawn from the cell until the voltage falls to approximately 1.7 volts at which point is it

The specific gravity of the solutionor leectrolyte is a valuable indication of the condition of the cell. The normal specific gravity is usually given on the name plate of the battery and when the battery is fully chagred, should be from 1.215 to 1.260. The battery discharged below a point where the specific gravity is 1.175. Due to natural evaporation and heating of the battery with a consequent low-ering of the solution, it is necessary to add distilled water at intervals, so that the level of the electrolyte is always at least one-half inch above the tops of the plates. The normal charging rate of the battery is marked on the name plate and this rate should not be exceeded, as current forced through the battery in excess of this amount causes buckling and short circuit ing of the plates. The battery should be kept clean and the terminals

These instructions carefully followed will result in good service and a considerable lengthening of battery life.

Climbing parties lost in the deep snows of the Alps may be rescued through the use of the electric wave of radio communication. A French engineer after twenty years of experimenting has at last perfected a small wireless outfit which is capable of withstanding the exceptional atmospheric conditions of these lofty mountains. Radio, therefore, will supplement the courageous work of the St. Bernard dogs in their wonderful rescue of lost mountain climbers. By the use of a small but powerful radio set, parties in danger can receive rapid assistance by sending wireless messages to the Mont Blanc observatory. Radio thus makes another contribution to its marvelous deeds in the saving of human life.

As the fourth number on the program The Constitution presented "Sleep and the Roses," by Tate, in a tenor solo by Charles W. Harrison. This is the first time Harrison's sunging has been sent out from WGM, and this number went well, according to land phone reports to The Constitution during the concert.

"Daughter of the Regiment," by Donisetti, a soprano solo by Freida Hempel, was the fifth selection. Miss Hempel's voice has been sent from WGM before and has delighted the radio audiences of The Constitution.

The concluding selection was "The Nightingale Song," as presented by Helen Clark, contralto.

POLICE CHIEF BELL FACES TRIAL TONIGHT

Keen interest is being manifested in the trial scheduled for Tuesday night of Police Chief G. H. Bell, of College Park, under accusation of "general inefficiency" preferred several weeks ago by Councilmen C. F. Caldwell, C. M. Curtis, W. D. Corley and J. T. Martin.

He will be tried before the Mayor and general council and the hearing is set for 7:30 o'clock. The prosecution will be represented by Attorney Samuel D. Hewlett, while Chief Bell will be defended by Attorney Paul Carpenter and H. A. Allen.

The suggestion recently made to employ radio in the teaching of Esperanto, while it may lead to no definite results, nevertheless opens an interest results, nevertheless opens an interesting avenue of speculation as to the advantages that would accrue if there were an international lauguage which would the up all countries using the radiotelephone, and the further thought that radio could be usefully employed in disseminating such language. The young man arose and approached her. The fact that she deliberately turned her back upon him brought increased force to his halting plea.

Verne, you still think that of me?" If I were not what I say I am, you might accuse me of insulting you, but think a minute. Lord knows I have no reason to be vain about myself, but does my work look like that of a pretender? I am a good many things I ought not to be, but I am not a revenuer. The best of me-the artist of me-painted, you not the man-I am happy-almost prayerful in my happiness that you see yourself in it. If my mother were living, Verne, I should want her to know you—to see the fine creature whom I—I—"

He paused, confusion over the delicate task of overcoming the outraged modesty of this girl so close, yet not close enough, to nature. She seemed not to have heard him. Her eyes were on the photograph of Sylvia. Her attention settled upon the flower eyes, the gentle lips, the depths of the decolletage which revealed more than it concealed the attraction of girlish curls. To Parker the moment seemed long before Vernaluska turned. The red on her outspoken resentment still mottled her cheeks, but her eyes held a question. Her lips opened, as if about to voice it, then closed in a stiff line.

"That," Parker answered, "is a picture of the woman I always have respected most in the world—that is most until I met you"

"Is she, then, a woman grown?" Vernaluska's surprise seemed genuine. 'I calculated she was just a child." He nodded. "Looking at it, I never notice that the subject isn't completely dressed. We think a whole lot more of the beauty in which God Himself clothed a woman-we artists-than of what her dressmaker supplies."

"I reckon a collar of any goods, even a flower, would spoil her," the girl of the mountains admitted.

Her glance swerved, from a guilty remembrance of the correction of his painting which she had been about to make. "Likely you don't mean any harm using my face and my"-she hesitated-"my hair in your picture. Likely I'm too particular about myself. You see, I've never worn what you city folk would call a party

"Why not? You have shown yourself friendly in acts, if not in words. You must like me a little, or you wouldn't have been so kind to me ever since that first day."

"Like you? I despise you!" Parker looked at her, deeply disistent, but if you despise me, why mistaken in his calling. He says it is that other day when-"

There are two classes of pepole in this world along with the innumerable other classifications such as "folks who like olives and folks who don't") the people who are satisfied with nothing short of doing what they set out to do, and the people who think that having a good excuse is just as good as getting results.

Here is the sort of thing I mean: I know of a man who for 35 years has been in the same organization without making much headway. His excuse is that the head of the firm had several sons and nephews to whom were given all the important executive positions. That man brings forward that explanation of his minor p with the same satisfaction with which a different kind of a man would speak of his own advancement. Of course there is some truth in it. But you know as well as I do that there are men who would not be satisfied with that excuse, and who would either have blasted their way through it to the top, or have gone elsewhere .

A man on our street started a business of his own on a very small capital and against the advice of friends. His end of the business has been carried on skilfully and well, but the people who promised to buy the bulk of his who are satisfied only with good remy fault," he says; "if those people is a third class much larger than had been honest I would have made a whale of a thing of it, just as I said content. If the other kind of man had gone into that business, one of two things would have happened. Either he would have found out in the first place, whether the firm was to depend on his market was honest or not, or, when that market failed him, he would have found another. But this man found an excuse instead of finding another market. More Excuses.

Of course it is not only in business hat people are satisfied to let the excuse take the p lace of executino. In school, in college, in games, in housework in club work, in social life, we do find a club member who can be depended upon to give an unimpeachable excuse for not getting the 20 articles she promised for the fancy goods table than it is to find one who can be depended upon to turn over those 20 articles, rain or shine.

Why We Plan Them. Sometimes when I don't feel-like doing something I know I ought to do, I catch myself thinking. "Well, I can say that-I-etc." And then I know that I am putting myself in the class of the weaklings who are satisfied with excuse instead of accomplishment.

I said at the beginning that there were just two classes of pepole, those suits, and those who are content with business failed. "The failure was not a good excuse. I was wrong. There either. Most of us belong to it.

ilege to give the first token of recogthe same thing. It is always easier to nition. She does not seek out a man seeking. Then when he has found the woman or girl to whom he had been introduced on some former occasion. he must wait for her to recognize him. It is what the French call a "faux pas" (false move) for him to bow to her or to hold out his hand before the woman makes a sign of recogni tion.

If the girl or woman happens to have a large circle of acquaintances, it is possible that she may not recall him, especially if she has met him but once. In that case, he should not resent her failure to recognize him at the time. If he wishes, he may ask the hostess for a reintroduction, and in the ensuing evoluantory talk, he in the ensuing explanatory talk, he can determine for himself whether the non-recognition was intentional or unitentional. Pryor Street P.-T. A. To Stage Play.

Eva Aldrich, [218 Union St., Emporia, Kansas.

There are many women who first used our Vegetable Compound during their girlhood days. They found it a valuable help during trying periods. In later years they use it whenever they feel those annoying symptoms which women often have.

It is prepared carefully from medicinal plants, whose properties are especially adapted to correct the troubles women have.

To Stage Play.

The comfort committee of the Pryor Street School P.-T. A., with Mrs. G. H. Christian as chairman, will have charge of a comedy, "The District School." to be given in the school auditorium on Friday evening, April 28. at 3 o'clock.

This play will be staged by the home talent of Milton Avenue school, and will be a great success. All patrons and friends of Pryor Street school are most cordially invited to attend. Admission, adults, 25 cents; children. 15 cents.

Alex came ipon Dale and Diana talking confidentially and was instantly jealous. She is welcomed into the family by the idmiral, who has a weakness for Marjorle, but an incident occurring at the same time at luncheon at the Plaza, makes her less in favor of marrieg than ever.

CHAPTER XX.

A Confession.

After that day in town events happened quickly; sometimes Diana believed that marriage had provided more of a whirlwind existence than her most ebutante year, She and Alex were entertained constantly during the brief shore leave he had—extended at the admiral's instigation.

Stuart Langley and the self-effacing Mary came down to see their daughter before the departure of the bridal pair for Alex's new station in San Francisco.

The meeting with the new son-in-law went off rather well, despite the fact that Stuart Langley was disgust-ed at having to come to town in sum-mer and roundly berated Diana for not postponing her marriage until the not postponing her marriage until the cold weather.

He eyed his wilted collar in disgust in the mirror and flicked an imaginary bit of dust from his white flannels that became his tall frame and set off the iron gray hair.

But, withal, he was pleased at the match his daughter had made.

"I always thought world he are."

match his daughter had made.

"I always thought you'd be another such damn fool as your Aunt Marjorie and keep half a dozen good men jumping around you all your life. Where's Dale?" he demanded suddenly. "Where's the faithful old dog Tray these days?"

Diana resented the appelation. She flushed and tossed her coppery head.

"Not nearly so faithful this summer, dad. I think 'old dog Tray' is beginning to think about another master!"

"Huh! Good thing! Serve Mar-jorie damn well right!" grunted Stuart.

Then he turned to his quiet wife.
"Well, Mary, the little bird has flown the nest. Seems pretty lonely how, doesn't it—thinking of home without her." The dramatic instinct in him-even though he had no audience except his wife and daughter—brought a husky ote to his voice.

Mary Langley nodded. She rarely spoke in answer to Stuart's questions, it saved a scene not to disagree with him and to agree with him usually

"What do you think you are—a poll parrot? Why the devil can't you have an opinion of your own once?"
It had been many years since that question had ceased to bring tears to Mary Langley's mild blue eyes.
On this occasion she agreed with him gravely that home would be very lonely without their little girl, and something in her wistful manner brought the smart of salt to Diana's eyes.

She went over and slipped her arms around the thin shoulders.
"Never mind, mother I'll be home often—always when Alex is away on sea duty, and that will be heaps of the times, I believe."

She said it so cheerfully that even Stuart Langley came out of his ad-miration for himself in the mirror on the opposite wall and looked at his daughter sharply.

Sea Duty Welcome. "You don't mean to say that you want your husband to leave you?"
Diana hesitated a moment, then nodded defiantly.
"Most representations are unliked by the

"If he has to be tied to my apron string in order to be held, I don't want to hold him," she answered with spirit, "Would you, mother?"

Mary Langley shook her head smilingly, indicating that it was a point on which she had no opinion, but her blue eyes were very sad.

Diana caught her breath.
"Suppose," she thought, "suppose."

"Suppose," she thought, "suppose marriage should break me as it has her? Suppose I some day reach the point where nothing matters? How awful! And yet I might!" She had a swift recollection of Alex's talk with her in the garden the night of their wedding and the opinions he had expressed—half jestingly it was true—about wifely

She shivered suddenly as though a cloud had passed over the sun bringing a chill wind.

"Who is he?" asked Mary Langley quietly.

Diana raised startled eyes, but she could not control the tell-tale flush.

"Whom do you mean?"
"It is not Lieutenant Leigh!" said Mary Langley in that same quiet tone," "Diana, why did you do it?" For a moment Diana was tempted to dissemble, to laugh the whole thing off, but she knew somehow that she couldn't deceive those quiet eyes. She came over and knelt beside her mother and laid her head with its bright bobbed hair, that made her the first momentary surcease of the ache in her heart.

For the first time, also, she felt herself really close to the quiet ghost of a woman who was her mother, and though she had purposely spent most of her girlhood away from her home, she was actually regretful when, with Alex Leigh beside her, she set her face westward toward the Golden Gate. The interest of the school and college set of Atlanta centers in the appearance of the Georgia Tech Marionetts in their burlesque playlet, "Sneezer et Cleopatrick," at Egleston hall Friday evening, May 26, at 8 o'clock. The Marionettes will be presented under the auspices of the Y. W. C. A. girl reserves, who have interested the Tech students in aiding them to raise an additional fund for sending delegates to the Y. W. C. A. south Atlantic field conference to be held for girl reserves in June at the Y. W. C. A. camp at Highland, Ga. Admission to the rollicking playlet will be 25 cents. The scene is laid in the old Egyptian period and the Marionettes in the cast wear costumes of that time. The costumes are rich and elaborate and were designed and nuade by the Marionettes. The cast follows: Chulius Victrola Sneezer, Iver Henry Granath; Gus Gastretus, Hugh Saussy; Lon Lombago, George Brittingham; Ivanilth, a milk maid. Robert Dunwoody; Youvabite, a foot maiden, Tom Fagan; Havapane, James Stakely; Helena Cuticura, Jimmie Whitfield; Cleopatrick, Roderick Brantley: Asparagus Brutus, Nisbit Marye; Witch of the Seehorra. AT WOMAN'S WINDOW

BY W. L. GEORGE

A mental school, now defunct, was not long ago trying to teach to be observant. It is indeed extraordinary how little we observe thing which do not interest us. It is not a merit in a woman to observe the her husband is "detained on business" every Tuesday night, for that he an obvious interest and may make her suspicious. Where the merit observation comes is in the small details of life.

For instance, I wonder how many people know whether anthrac is heavier than coal? You may say that these facts are not of the dir mest interest, but they do matter because the woman who systematical records in her mind every little thing that passes develops a shrewdne that is almost unbelievable. She begins by noticing that her husbar wears odd boots by observing that the linings are differently colored she goes on to hear exactly what people say and therefore to note in he mind facts that will be useful to her either in defense or in attack. Ever woman should train herself in observation. One way is to speak slow and speak as little as may be, and to repeat in her mind the sentence s has just heard. When she does that the remark will acquire new me ings; it will reveal all sorts of suggestions, perhaps confessions. St will get into the habit of hearing well. She will understand. Many me complain that their wives do not understand them. To understand man too much may in the end not content him, but all the same it seen to me, if I may so call it, a peril on the safe side. This season navy and other dark blues do not have such carte blanche to all doors of fashion as these shades have had in other seasons. A few seasons ago a well-dressed woman chose blue for her suit or mid-season frock unless there were some very good reason why she wished to choose something else. Navy blue was especially liked by American women, old and young. Doubtless because it eminently became them. will learn something of life. She sees much of Keith Gilbert, not realizing that all New York is gossiping about them, and later is horrified to learn that, despite his social position, he is a botlegger. She attempts to earn her own living, unsubcessfully, but through her newly gained knowledgs of people is able to help several persons whose affairs have become badly entangled. She learns that the pursuit of pleasure is vain, and begins to envy Barbars Lane, an old-fashloned wife of her acquaintance, whom she has always been inclined to pity.

She goes to a midnight dance ciub with some of new friends, and there encounters her husband, after months of separation.

CHAPTER LXXXVI. A Distressing Scene.

A Distressing Scene.

For a moment Sally could not believe that it was really Dick who sat there across the room with another man and the two pretty women whom he seemed to like so much. She watched him for a moment, then turned away, wretchedly unhappy.

"Let's dance," she said, rising impatiently. This had to happen somt time, of course—they could not both be in New York and not meet. She wondered how Dick would feel about it; would he be embarrassed by this encounter, or would he take it casually? Would the people with him know who she was? The younger one, a girl of about 18, seemed to be much interesed in him—was she in love with him? Heartsick, Sally stepped down to the dance floor, yielded to her partner's embrace, and began to dance.

The music was stimulating, the best sort of jazz; the curious little minor wail that the negrom usicians seemed to favor appealed especially to her. She tried not to watch Dick and the pretty girl, who were dancing, too; he must not think that she was too much interested. Yet it was almost impossible to keep her eyes from him.

It seemed to her in that moment that she loved him more than ever. He was so big, so strong looking—his face showed so much strength and decision; he would never be guilty of the little subterfuges, the pettiness that characterized Granam Browne, or of the brutal disregard of those who stood in the day of his desires, that marked Keith Gilbert. He had been so good to her, so thoughtful—and she had told him that his love bored her, had turned her back on all that he offered, and followed false gods.

"Well, Sally!" It was Dlck's voice that spoke to her as the music storthat he offered, and followed false gods.

"Well, Sally!" It was Dick's voice that spoke to her as the music stopped. Her heart fluttered madly as she answered him, and when, a few moments later, she saw him crossing the floor to the table where she sat, she grew suddenly weak. Only she and Graham Browne were sitting there; the intermission had been short and the others were dancing again.

She wished that Browne would go away. She felt that she would give anything for an opportunity to talk a few moments with Dick unhampered by his presence. If she as not to see he rhusband again until this hideous year of separation expired—and if then she was to see him only to lose him—she must have this chance to unburden her heart.

He passed beside the table and spoke to her, and Sally introduced him to Browne, who had been drinking steadily, and acknowledged the introduction thickly, with a blurred accent that betrayed his condition. Sally turned to Dick apologetically, and the expression in his keen eyes hurt her like a knife thrust.

her like a knife thrust.

She realized suddenly how the people with whom she was associating must look to his eyes. Dick was not a prude, but Lee's free and easy mode of living, the rather curious standards of conduct that her friends lived up to—or down to—while not actually wrong, were not the clean-cut rules of Dick's life. Not black or white—just gray—that's what her friends would seem to him.

"Will you dance with me, Sally?"

"Will you dance with me, Sally?" he asked.

"Oh—of course!" she replied. But before she could rise Graham Browne laid a detaining hand on hea arm; his hand felt hot and moist on the bare flesh, but he grasped her arm so firmly that she could not withdraw it.

"No—she won't!" Browne exclaimed. "She'll stay here and talk to me; this is my party."

"But I want to—" she began, when but his words were as forceful as blows.

"Your wife!" Browne sneered.

"Why man, your wife's on a vacation—has been since I first met her. She'll dance with anybody she wants to and you can't stop her. She's no more your wife right now than she is mine or naybody's else—she—"

He had half risen and was leaning heavily on the table, his body swaying slightly. Sally shrunk back in her chair, thankful that they were in a corner and that nobody was near.

Browne's voice grew louder and thicker. "Want to fight?" he asked, staring up at Dick. "Come on—let's have it out—let's—"

"You swine!" Dick exclaimed. "Certainly I won't fight with you, and make my wife the talk of the gossip mongers of New York. You—"

Browne leaned further across the table, lurching from side to side. "You care a lot about your wife, all of a sudden" he blustered.

Sally held out an appealing hand to her husband. "Dick, perhaps if you would go."

He has worked up a reputation locally as being a fighter who never slows up arom the tap of the gong until the fights is over, and with Budd going the same way:

"It's going to be a r-r-real ser-r-rap," says "Red."

SPECIAL ATTRACTIONS

IN PRELIMINARIES.

Battling Benson and Billie West meet in the initial six-round bout on meet in the initial six-round bout on the program and then the fun starts. When Battling Nick and Pal Flourncy slide into the ring, local fans at the ball park are in for a treat that is seldom accorded a fight bug. Flourncy has never won a battle locally, and he is the only man alive who can spot a golfer two strokes a hole and beat him 19 up and 17 to play in a 36-hole alibi match. But he will give any fight fan the worth of his admission price, and when he ties up with Battling Nick, who is a new-comer in the local field, a real feature is assured.

The semi-windup is a ten-round battle between Freddie Boorde and Jimmy Murphy. Boorde needs no introduction to local fight fans. He has been absent from this baliwick for about a year fighting in the north and east. In Murphy he takes on a rugged customer and one apt to "cuckoo" him any time after the fight starts.

This card looks to be one of the best balanced the legion has put on in some time, and with what might be termed three feature bouts, a record crowd should turn out for the fistcuffing.

to look for the reasons why, etc.

President Spiller has been a believer in and a worker for a winner and he has been trying to tell the Atlanta fans that he was going to put one in the field, until people began to take it for granted that a speech of this nature was the expected thing and they grew to look on them with suspicion. But now that the Crackers have stepped out for a couple of wins—President Spiller is willing to state a little more fully his plans and specifications for winning the majority of his games.

To begin with, waivers have been asked on J. C. Stewart, who came to the Crackers from the Florida State league, where he managed a club last year. Stewart looked like a winning pitcher when he first reported to the club, but he did not condition and he was unable to get in shape for playing real ball, although he has been given every opportunity to get in shape. He came to the Crackers from the Baltimore Internationals.

STATISTICS "Doc" Celebrates By Clouting a Two-Bagger With Bases Full

Gene Tunney, present American light-heavyweight champion, meets Harry Greb, of Pittsburg, conqueror of Tom Gibbons, in a 15-round decision bout involving the American title. The fight will settle one of the most interesting arguments in the ring game at present, for Tunney won his title by outpointing old Bat Levinsky when Levinsky had gone way back, and Greb's record is much stronger, including victories over good real heavyweights.

Before Tunney beat Levinsky, the battler had been beaten by Georges Carpentier for the world's light-heavyweight championship and also by Boy McCormick, the red-haired English boxer who, however, neglected to claim the American light-heavyweight title. Tunney was guilty of no such oversight and has made considerable money just by exploiting this rather insignificant distinction.

Tunney's Hands O. K.

Memphis, Tenn., May 22.—(Special.)—Magnanimity, generosity and desire to do a fellow man in need a deed of kindness cost Chief Spencer Abbott, of the Chicks, a ball game ioday. The Chief's generosity and open-heartedness enabled the crippled and cracked Crackers to win a ball game. Through the generosity of Chief Abbott, Herbert Smith, wore a Cracker uniform this afternoon. Here's what Herbert Smith contributed to the Chicks' defeat and the Crackers' victory: A two-base hit with the bases filled, and as two-base hits with the bases filled, customarily do, Herbert Smith's base-hit scored three Crackers. These three scores were enough for the Crackers to win and would have been a good day's work for Herbert Smith or any "ole" Smith, but Mr. Smith, in a Cracker uniform, tapered off his afternoon of labor with a home run, that made the Cracker total scores seven. Before Herbert Smith skinned off his "cits" and slipped on a Cracker uniform he was "Doc" Smith, a Chick uniform he was "Doc" Smit seven hits, including three doubles and a triple in the sixth inning and made hut one score. The Crackers hit Benton, a right-sider, hard and opportunely, but their opportunities were afforded by loose fielding by the Chicks. But three of the Crackera' seven runs were of the "earned" variety. The Crackers should have been retired in the third without a score, before Mr. Smith, now of the Crackers, secured his base-sweeping double. The first Cracker to score in the first inning scored as the result of getting on base by an error. However, the Crackers made three legitimate scores and as it ultimately resulted they were sufficient for a victory.

Abbott Switches Batting Order.

Chief Abbott, of the tribe, turned his batting order and line-up topsy-tury but it failed to bring about any results as far as enabling the Chicks to hit in the pinches. On account of a lefthander pitching for the Crackers, Chief Abbott kept Polly McLary, a lefthanded hitter, on the baseman, to first. Bill Huber, who has been playing third, took Yockey's place at second, and Hugh Critz, who has been out a couple of days account of ine ring at Madison Square Garden fuesday night and begin a flirtation with Georges Carpentier for a world's ight - heavyweight championship natch.

up toward the highest again.

NEW ORLEANS SPOTS.

New Orleans. May 22.—Spot cotton quiet and unchanged. Sales on the policy of the 19.96c and closed at 20.06c, compared with 19.77c at the close of last week.

The market opened firm at a decline of 3 points on May, but generally 22 to 33 points higher on steady Liverpool cables, favorable Manchester trade reports, the firmer opening tone of sterling exchange, and the higher market for bar silver in London. Buying became more general as private reports of rains in the southwest began to reach the ring, and before the advance was checked active months showed net gains of 41 to 53 points, with July selling at 20.39c and December at 20.24c.

There was considerable realizing around these figures and some scattered selling for a reaction was reported during the early afternoon owing to the fact that the official detailed weather reports failed to show as much rainfall in the southwest as indicated by early advices. July eased off to 20.09c and December to 19.88c, with active months generally selling back to within 10 to 20 points of last week's closing quotations.

New Orleans—Middling, ported during the early afternoon owing to the fact that the official detailed weather reports failed to show as much rainfall in the southwest as indicated by early advices. July eased off to 20.09c and December to 19.88c, with active months generally selling back to within 10 to 20 points of last week's closing quotations.

The forecast, however, pointed to a continuation of unsettled weather in the belt, while trade interests were reported buyers on the reaction, and the later market was quiet but steady, closing several points up from the lowest on the active position. Wall street and western interests were credited with selling considerable cotton during the day, while Liverpool, New Orkens and some of the spot house brokers were buyers. According to private advices, there was a rainfall of 10 inches at Sulphur Springs, Texas, and heavy rains at some other places, but the official details showed nothing more than moderate rains in Texas, the precipitation being heavier in Oklahoma.

Combined with the bad weather news were further accounts of a good spot demand in the interior with only light offerings in evidence at any point. In the local spot market there was little for sale on factors' sample tables and the market was officially called quiet and unchanged at 20.00 cents a pound for middling.

While much rain fell over the cotton region over the week-end, the trade raid most attention to conditions in Texas and Oklahoma, both of which states received moisture which was described in private messages as being the last thing wanted in sections that were trying to plant, replant, or cultivate young cotton. The first advance was the strongest of the day and it carried prices 36 to 41 points upward. Realizing by longs reduced the gains to 5 to 9 points but later upturns, based on reports that cotton was being played up on account of the weevil in sections of both Texas and Georgia, sent prices well up toward the highest again.

Chicago, May 22.—Although wheat prices took an upturn at the start today, the market averaged lower. Heavy arrivals here and at other leading centers indicated that the amount of wheat still available was large. The close was unsettled at 2 1-2c net decline to 7-8c advance, with May $1.33 and July $1.235-8 to $1.23 3-4. Corn finished 1-8 to 3-8c down, and oats off half to 1c.

In provisions, the outcome varied from 7c decline to a rise of 20c. Most traders gradually veered to the bear side as the fact became apparent that for at least the time being any gains in price would be hard to maintain. Lack of any big shipping demand here together with the unusually large receipts and the continued good-sized movement from the interior all tended to stimulate selling which included considerable liquidation on the part of holders.

Besides, crop reports were generally favorable, and it was predicted that harvesting in the southwest would begin about the middle of June. An increase of nearly 4,000,000 bushels in the amount of wheat on ocean passage had some effect also as a bearish influence. Decrease of the domestic visible supply total was anticipated influence. Decrease of the domestic visible supply total was anticipated more or less by purchasers of wheat at the opening and was only of moderate help in rallying the market at the last, especially as messages from the Atlantic seaboard said exporters were idle, holding off for lower prices. Receipts here today totalled 516 carloads and there were deliveries of 385,000 bushels on May contracts. Vessel room was chartered for 280,000 bushels to Buffalo.

Corn and oats weakened when wheat had a sinking spell.

Provisions were depressed by a drop in hog values. May ribs, however, formed an exception, being in active demand from shorts.

With regard to the activities and growth of the Bank, its President, Mr. James S. Alexander, has written us

"Referring to your advice that you have purchased a block of stock of this Bank and to your request for information respecting its history, growth and condition, I beg to advise you as follows:

The Bank of Commerce in New York was organized in 1839 and entered the National Banking System in 1865. From the outset it has been essentially a commercial bank and its development and growth have coincided with the development and growth of the business and commerce of the United States. Its present business is national and international in scope. The bank in the last ten years has, in round figures, increased its net deposits from $104,259,000 to $302,190,000. The capital during these years has remained unchanged at $25,000,000. Its surplus and undivided profits, which stood at $16,257,000 ten years ago, now amount to $36,206,000. The assets of the Bank are conservatively valued and the figures of its capital, surplus and undivided profits are, therefore, not subject to reduction.

The Bank has had an unbroken dividend record. For thirty-eight years prior to 1916, the dividend rate was 8% per anuum. Its capital during that period was several times increased. In each of the years 1916 and 1917, extra dividends of 2% were paid. In 1918 the regular dividend rate was increased to 10%. In 1919, in addition to the regular dividend of 10%, an extra dividend of 2% was paid. During 1920 the regular dividend rate was increased to 12% and an extra dividend of 3% was paid. In 1921, in addition to the regular dividend of 12%, an extra dividend of 4% was paid."

Coca-Cola Declares One Dollar Per Share Dividend on Common

BY MARION KENDRICK.

With bad weather conditions continuing in the southwestern section of the belt through the past week-end, reports of increased spot sales in Liverpool, and optimistic trade news, cotton on Monday left its downward trend of last Friday and Saturday, recording advances that remained steady throughout the day's session.

In New York, the general close was 16 to 38 points higher. May opened 3 points lower, but other months were 22 to 33 points higher, and as reports reached the exchange the advance continued until net gains of 41 to 53 points had been registered. At this point July sold at 20.39 and December at 20.24, being met with heavy realizing. A decline set in only to be followed by a short rally when buying became very active. Middling spots were at 21.80.

The same ruling developments kept cotton at a high level in New Orleans throughout the day. Private reports from Texas and Georgia to the effect that weevlis were so numerous in some sections that cotton was being plowed up, were circulated freely on the exchange and had a decided effect in causing a strong rally shortly after noon, which carried July to 20.07 cents per pound. Advances of 36 to 41 points early in the day were the highest of the session. Realizing caused declines, but the undertone remained firm and gains later were made. July closed at 19.99 with the general market 19 to 20 points net higher. Spot middling remained unchanged at 20.00 cents a pound. Atlanta spots shot upward 25 points to 20 cents per pound, the highest price here since October 11, 1921. The Atlanta market was reported active at this gain, and the news had a bullish effect in both New York and New gain, and the news had a bullish effect in both New York and New

There are two major factors operating to maintain the present prices of cotton and to establish higher prices as the season progresses, according to J. W. Jay & Co., of New York. One of these, it was stated, is an unsatisfied deferred demand for the remnant of past crops, while the other is weather peril and boll weevil damage to the crop now un-

"During last two months, students of the cotton situation have been perplexed by reason of indifference of consumers to constantly diminishing reserves and their strange conviction that political disorders in western Europe are portent of the inability of people of the world to procure essentials of life," reads the dispatch. "National economy is disorganized in more than one country, but people of the statement of disorganized in more than one country, but people of all nations have considerable measure of prosperity and satisfaction of their simple wants is a potential economic force. Reserves raw cotton and its products gradually have been reduced as these wants have been supplied now we are on verge of actual exhaustion.

Resources Uncertain.

"At no time since the civil war has the world's cotron resources been so uncertain. The immediate future promises little relief from anxiety, as the American cotton crop this year is seriously imperiled it now seems evident that the area planted is not likely to exceed greatly the area planted last year. Weather in the west has so far been deplorable, while in itol Ave. Bapt.

that they are already destroying part of the crop by feeding upon tender leaves of sprouting plants. In two states only, Arkansas and North Caronina, are crop conditions reasonably normal, and the only prospect for moderate yield lies in perfect growing weather. Henceforth if such weather be not vouchsafed another crop failure in the United States confronts the cotton industry. In view of the world's now steadily increasing need for American cotton the situation produced by such crop failure would be disastrous economically."

And Reviews

More rains in Texas over week-end took the shorts by surprise this moraing, as most traders had gone home Saturday anticipating nothing but clear skies. On the early morning advance there was a good deal of selling by those who expect a rather high condition report. We continue to advocate purchase of cotton on all good recessions, and believe that ultimately it will sell at higher levels.—A. A. Housman & Co.

believe that ultimately it will sell at higher levels.—A. A Housman & Co.

Morning Stock Letter.

The salls "took the market away" from the industrials Saturday, with no news other than the white house conference. Fothing tangible, according to published reports, developed there, and the unwillingness of railroad men to sanction rate reductions without compensatory wage reductions leaves the situation as it was. It is likely that the rails were advanced became it was felt that they were really lagging behind the market. Some weeks ago the rails were alowiy closing the price gap between the average level and that of the industrials, but lately this gap has widened.

The great supply of money is the primary consideration to these groups which are intereste in advancing particular stocks, and so long as no distinctly unfavorable news appears it is altogether probable that the market indicative will remain with those committed to the long side.

The average person interested in the market finds the greatest attunuation in the signs of domestic business revival, and in that direction be can see almost record auto production, steadily advancing metal prices, maintained production at the steel mills and continued absorption of new investment is sues.

Merger of Railroad Companies Now Talk Of Street Speculators

BY R. L. BARNUM.

Constitution's New York Financial Correspondent. New York, May 22.—There is not the slightest doubt but that the public is speculating in the stock market in a big way. All of the large brokerage houses with out-of-town wires reported stacks of buying orders accumulated over Sunday. One large Broadway firm said that its largest open market order was for 300 shares and that 80 per cent of the 100-share and odd-lot buying orders were for rails. Over Sunday the story got about in speculative quarters that the railway presidents at the white house dinner Saturday night were asked why they had not done something with the tentative plans put out months ago by the interstate commerce commission, suggesting that most of the mileage of the country be merged into some twenty systems. With definite news that Youngstown had dropped out of the proposed six-company steel merger, speculative Wall street, eager for merger talk, fell in with the rumors that the rails were now to take the place of steels in proposed consolidations. One story had it that the heavy buying in New Haven of the past few days was for the account of Canadian Pacific for control.

New Haven was on the very verge of receivership on April 1 when $27,000,000 bond issue came due. An appeal was made to the hold its $27,000,000 bond issue came due. An appeal was made to the h ers of these securities to take in exchange new bonds bearing a higher interest rate, J. P. Morgan making a visit to New England to impress the bankers and the public with the seriousness of the situation admitted frankly that unless the bonds were exchanged there would be a receivership. That was nearly two months ago and only within the past few hours has it been learned that this refunding plan was successful. That is explanation enough for why New Haven has been advance ing from the very low price of early this year.

But, money, because it is not being used in general trade is grow ing easier, the big outside public is in a speculative mood, merger talk is in the air and optimism is being encouraged by the highest officials at Washington. Under such conditions no one can say how much higher the stock market will go.

Today's market leaders were Steel common, New Haven and Gen eral Motors, three Morgan stocks. From this speculative Wall street concluded that the "corner house" was bullish.

Pennsylvania railroad reports a decline in the number of its shareholders for the second consecutive month. On May 1, according to to-day's figures, there were 140,393, a decrease of 1,417, compared with April 1. This makes a decrease of 1,528 for the two months. The average holding is now 71.12 shares against 70.41 on April 1. It appears that large interests are again accumulating Pennsylvania. The corearned $1 a share for it stock during the month of March alone.

Lower Production.

Washington reports a falling off in the production of soft coal for the week ending May 18. London cables announce inquiries at South Wales for 250,000 tons of coal for shipment to the United States. Wall street bankers are expecting some action from Washington within the next few weeks looking toward a settlement of the coal strike.

There are some people in Wall street who believe that when the Great Northern directors meet next Money Market.

Automobile production for April increased 30 per cent over figures for March, the department of commerce reports today. Here are the figures for passenger cars and trucks: April, 196,512 and 21,944; March, 152,657 and 19,449; February, 109,039 and 12,968; January, 81,638 and 9,204. Despite this showing, however, the best judges here of the stock market believe that automobile shares have had the best of their 1922 advance. It came early as it always does.

New York, May 22.—Heavy cotton goods were demanded today by general manufacturing trades. Retailers and jobbers bought moderately. Markets were firm with a raising tendency as cotton advanced. Raw allow was higher and primary markets were stive. Burlaps were stronger. Demand for worsted goods was moderate, while some lines of woolens sold steadily. Linens had a tendency to advance.

In the first place, the villian is disposed of in the first reel—but his influence hangs over the remainder of the picture. There's a crippled sister who becomes an important figure when a cure makes her into a super-flapper. And as an overtone to it all, is a will which stands as barrier to the happiness of several persons.

Miss Ayres is splendidly convincing as the young widow, while Conrad Nagel and Clarence Burton are well cast as leading man and "heavy," respectively.

The program is featured by several pleasing numbers. Kane and Grant. "Just a Boy and a Girl." are excellent comedians and dancers. Their Bowery dance was warmly greeted, and the girl is as winsome and young and pretty as any seen here in many months.

The Kennedy brothers succeed in making a burnt-cork number a winner. Their cross-fire chatter is full of real wit, and the setting itself was pleasing to lovers of the black-face art. Leddy and Leddy, who a whirling dance, is also splendidly accomplished.

The other act worthy of favorable comment is that of Roy La Pearl. It is a novelty offering. At it's opening one is led to suppose that it is an aerial act, in fact, La Pearl is billed as the world's foremost aerial gymnast, but a surprise is introduced at once and the number is transformed into one of the cleverest comedy sketches that has been offered this season.

Other offerings that please are Percy Chapman and Elsie Ring in an amusing absurdity introducing a boob character who keeps the house in laughter. Gibson and Betty in "A Counter Proposal," which is a comedy skit, with some good songs and dances, and Juggling Ferrier, who is an unusually clever manipulator of clubs, balls and hats.

The feature of the screen bill is Shirley Mason in "The Ragged Heiress."

close the bill, offer not only a clever tumbling act, but they are excellent in a series of new and fresh jokes. Elizabeth Brice, in "A Quiet Evening at Home," is acceptable in bright songs. Ray Henderson accompanies on the piano. Lucian Lucca, a man with a falsetto and a natural voice, wina applause with the opening act. "Doraldina."

(Af the Metropolitan.)

Doraldina, billed as "the world's greatest dancer," and greeted by a legion of admirers in Atlanta, marched away triumphantly with first honors at the Metropolitan yesterday in a series of dances such as only Doraldina can create and execute. Her fame as the fairest exponent of the hula-hula has traveled far; moreover, Atlanta remembered her engagement at the Grand theater last year when she smashed the records of that historic house, so the capacity audience that greeted her first appearance at the Metropolitan was warm in its welcome and loud in its praise.

Mae Murray, in "Fascination," proved even more delightful than in "Peacock Alley." Here she has the role of a Spanish-American girl, seen first against the background of gay New York, and later in the nicturesque environment of old Spain, where, escaping the vigilant eye of an austere aunt, she sees a buil fight and mingles with the holiday throngs.

There is a big dramatic moment when the young girl, a marvelous dancer, creates the dance of the buil fight, for the great toreador himself, and there is a big climax when the shadow of tragedy sweeps over the ga" party.

"The Inferior Sex."

"North of Rio Grande."

(At the Howard.)

Celebrities of the Arisona southwest; real sure enough cowboys with records to their name, make their initial screen appearances in "North of the Rio Grande," a Jack Holt-Beb Daniels Paramount picture, playing at the Howard this week.

Red Eagle, an Indian who holds the world's championship for bull-dogging steers, takes a prominent part in the exciting action which involves the two stars in incidents both above and below the southern border. Red Eagle has in his veins the blood of a notorious Apache chief who 60 years ago is credited with having massacred a hundred Mormons in the very country depicted in the photoplay.

"The Inferior Sex."

"Little Lord Fauntleroy."

(At the Strand.)

Mary Pickford proved herself the champion of union labor and its principles during the filming of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," now showing at the Strand.

While this photoplay was in progress of production, a strike was called in the picture industry which involved all carpenters, electricians and projection-machine operators. The men walked out because of a wage cut put into effect by producers. Mary Pickford, however, did not cut the wages of any of her employees and refused also to cut down her working force.

When the little star found it impossible to get electric current for lights on her stage without taking it from a generator employing a non-union crew, she hauled out her own specially made generator and mianufactured her own "juice."

"The Inferior Sex."

(At the Criterion.)

Outside of its unusual love story and the interest in its up-to-date problems of life, "The Inferior Sex" carries an especial appeal to women in the exquisite gowns displayed, its marwelous millinery creations, the beautiful settings and wonderful scenery. This picture, starring Mildred Harris Chaplin, the star charming, is being shown at the Criterion theater.

Mildred Harris Chaplin appears in different scenes in more than a dozen different gowns, all of them the last word in fashionable artistry. There are Paris creations as well as the finest work of the highest priced New York medistes.

Everyone of them is of the texture and make that women dream of, and will be extremely anxious to see. Hats, gives, hose, shoes and every article of women's apparel are matched in harmony and of the very latest mode. Women in the supporting cast also are stunningly gowned.

Two offerings stand out prominently on the vaudeville bill at Loew's Grand theater for the first half of the week. Za Za Adele and company is a dancing act but one that is exceptional in every way. Not only is it elaborately staged and costumed, but the dances are Atlanta Movie Star Finds Atlanta Girls Prettiest in World exotic Norma Talmadge in the picture, and had come to the Forsyth pretty largely to make comparisons. And when the comparisons were made the Forsyth Players suffered not one bit. To make the assertion emphatic, we repeat, not one bit.

Miss Robinson played the double role with an exquisite charm. She was a spirited and appealing Kathleen. She was as dainty and winsome a Monyeen as can be pictured and as the ghost she was as ethereal a thing as ever floated through the moonlight. Possessed of plenteous beauty, endowed with a rich voice that thrills and responds to emotions, and displaying a stage grace and ease, resultant from earnest study and something a little more than acquired artistry, it was easy to see that she will soon hold a warm place in the affections of Atlanta theater-specific property and some cares to see. In this he was ably seconded by Romaine Callender, whose work measured up to the high standard that Atlanta expected of him, following his fine impression here with Otis Skinner.

In fact the whole cast seemed capable of bigger things Monday night. Stuart Beebe played the murderer with fine dash and dramatic effect, while the prologue was daintily done by Miss Kathryn Givney and Miss Mary Tarry.

In Jane Cowl's Success

Everything was new at the Forayth Monday night, a new leading man, a new leading lady, new uniforms for Manager Remond's sprightly corps of hand-picked ushers, a brand new orchestra, and a new interpretation of a play that Atlanta has seen and welcomed before.

"Smillin' Through," the Jane Cowl success, was a particularly fortunate vehicle with which to introduce Miss Ruth Robinson to the patrons of the Forayth theater, fortunate because the audience had seen the beautiful Miss Cowl in the part and had seen the exotic Norma Talmadge in the picture, and had come to the Forsyth pretty largely to make comparisons. And when the comparisons were made

At the close of her death scene, she was given round after round of applause that was emphatically spon-taneous, probably the heartiest ap-splendid ease in acting, and some ideas of his own in presenting a part. He departed entirely from Miss Cowl's leading man's interpretation of under orders from Coroner Paul Donehoo, who is conducting an inquiry into the death of Carlos B. Stanley, 16 years old, of 5 West End avenue, and years old, of 5 West End avenue, and the serious injury of Ruddell Pulliam, 17, of 95 Lee street, both being victims of an assault by a crowd of young boys from the Bonnie Brae district, where Stanley and Pulliam had gone Sunday night to escort Miss Myrtle Goss, of 5 Bonnie Brae avenue, home from services at the West End Baptist church.

Nine youths Monday evening occupied cells in the Fulton county jail

In addition to the nine being held in the county jail, four more were taken into custody by officers of the juvenile court and are being held at juvenile court and are being held at the juvenile detention home. They are Gilbert White, 13 years old, 224 Stewart avenue: Fisher Maunen, 13, 110 Elbert street; Dallas Dorman, 15, 11 Gillett street, and J. W. Maxwell, 14, 16 Pearce street. Held in the Tower. Held in the Tower.

Those in the tower under suspicion of murder are Alvin W. Peck, 17 years old, 95 Pearce street; Bert Baisden, 15, 157 Tift street; Preston Heard, 16, 207 Tift street; Charles Cook, 15, 59 Bonnie Brae avenue; B. A. Farlow, 17, 31 Hope street; F. L. Mann, 16, 205 Tift street; Clifford Fair, 17, 68 Bonnie Brae avenue; F. H. King, 17, 11 Hope street, and J. L. Gower, 17, 17 Rockwell street.

They were arrested by city detectives following a probe into the fight and locked up at police station, after severe grilling by the officers. No Report Sunday.

Young Stanley is said to have stated, just before his death early Monday morning, that the crowd of boys began throwing rocks at them, one of the stones striking him in the left temple and another hitting Pulliam on the back of the head and neck. Neither Stanley or Pulliam threw rocks in return, both Stanley and Pulliam elaimed.

No report of the assenult was made to the police Sunday night, as it was not trought that Stanley's condition was dangerous. He stopped in a nearby drug store where medical attention was given. However, about midnight he was seized with convulsions, becoming unconscious about 3 o'clock Monday morning and drying an hour afterward.

Young Stanley told his mother. Mrs. Ida Stanley inst before he died, that as he and Pulliam had received the mount of the light opera "Mikado," and for the light opera

Officials of the Ad club announced Monday night that preparations are complete for the staging of the greatest frolic in the history of the organization when the dinner-dance and cabaret is held at 7:45 o'clock Tuesday evening at the Ansley roof garden.

It had been erronously announced that the dinner was to be served at 6:30 o'clock, but the committee in charge stated Monday that the time is to be 7:45 o'clock. Seventeen rauderille acts will comprise the big cabaret program, and between the numbers ballroom dancing will be enjoyed by the guesta. Members of the Rotary, Civitan, Lions and Kiwanis clubs will attend. Reservations are in charge of LeRoy Rogers, at Ivy 3206.

West Point cadets are required to study the daily newspapers as a part of their college course.

Listen, Mr. Average Man, Don't Be a Fool A MAN came to us yesterday who had bought a six-room house, with all city improvements, in a suburb of Atlanta. Price paid was $3,750; $500 cash, balance to be paid at $35 monthly with 7 per cent interest. The man who bought this was also to pay insurance and taxes and upkeep of the place. The interest on this place, with the taxes and insurance, is more than $15 monthly. The purchaser must pay this sum besides the $35 monthly principal, for 93 months before the place is his. He as out his $500, which the company is IN. The the place is his. He is out his $500, which the company is IN. The house is in a location where values do not increase. At the end of his eight years his house has gone down and must be built over again. What chance has the average man to pay for a place like this? The average man does not pay for his place, but gives it back to the company, and they sell it to some other man in the same manner they gold it to him.

This man who came to us yesterday could have bought a lot at Fernwood for $400. Terms, $40 cash, $10 monthly, with no interest or taxes. With his other $460 would have built him a 6-room weather boarded house, with well and toilet. It is in a section where values have increased for fifty years, with greater increases coming than have ever been known before. With the other $40 monthly he is now paying he could, in 12 months' time, have added city water, telephone, lights, bath and sewer, and plaster. In three years' time he could have a much better house than he has today, have it paid for complete, and save on the bill about $3,000.

Listen, Mr. Average Man, don't be a fool. Don't take hold of something too hot to handle. Don't bite off something that you can not chew. Don't throw the earnings of a lifetime into a bottomiess pit. The man who came to us yesterday realized his great mistake, but nevertheless. Five Hundred Dollars, goodby, goodby! You can own a home at Fernwood, on the Peachtree road, and you can buy it in such a manner that you will not lose it.

We are now building a new style house at Fernwood. It consists of five rooms and sleeping porch, with large front porch. House is weatherboarded, plastered, storm-sheathed, subfloored, painted white, brick flues and brick pillars, well and tollet. It sells for $1,000 on easy terms. Ask us about it, and come to see it. Mob Rule Condemned.

Mob rule and recent burning of negroes was denounced by a number of speakers in discussion of that portion of the report devoted to law and order which urged fair trials for all accused and added, "We can not too strongly urge upon our pastors and churches the importance of not becoming allied with or giving support and approval to any movement or organization that violates or tends to violate the law." There was no specific reference to any organization.

The convention voted to invite William Jennings Bryan to address its next annual meeting in Kansas City.

Referring to the appointment of Will H. Hays as head of the motion picture producers' association, the report, which is one of the final matters before the last business session of the convention, expressed the hope that Mr. Hays "will exercise what is supposed to be his great power for a thorough clean-up in the whole picture business."

Watson Threat To Fight Phipps Disrupts Senate

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS. BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Washington, May 22.—Postmaster appointments in Georgia started a hot exchange in the senate today between Senator Watson, democrat, of that state, and Senator Phipps, of Colorado, a republican member of the postoffice committee, with the result that business was disrupted for several minutes, after which the two senators took their controversy into the ators took their controversy into the corridor with the Georgia senator of-fering personal combat.

"If you say a word out of the way, I'll knock you down," Senator Wat-son said he told the Colorado senator, after they left the senate chamber.
Senator Phipps declined to see news-paper men to discuss the incident.
Senator Watson, discussing the dis-pute, which began while the senate was discussing the army bill, said Senator Phipps declined the challenge to personal combat, mentioned calling a senate sergeant-at-arms and then walked away.

Complaints Made. A number of persons in the senate corridors witnessed the clash between the senators, being attracted apparent-ly by the loud discussion which broke into a speech on the floor by Sena-tor Wadsworth, republican, New York, before the senators went outside. Senator Watson said he proposed to prevent confirmation of the three nominees, all of whom, he said, had made derogatory statements about him.

Complaints of the disturbance were made, according to Senstor Curtis, republican, Kansas, chairman of the rules committee, by several senators, and in the absence of a rule Senator Curtis said he arranged to talk with

POLITENESS CAUSES WOMAN $22.50 LOSS

A willingness to accommodate a negro who asked for change for a half-dollar Monday evening caused Mrs. J. I. Chandler, of 44 East Cain street, to lose $22.50 in money and valuable papers. She reported to police that she was approached by a negro at the corner of Courtland and Houston streets, who politely requested two quarters for a half-dollar. As she opened her pocketbook to get the change, the unidentified negro grabbed the purse and made his escape.

Piedmont Road Frontage

The activity in building on Piedmont Road is worthy of remark a number of lovely homes are going up in the section between Pied-mont Road and Roswell Road. This section has many advantages appealing to the home owner; has city water available, also electric lights and telephone service.

With the widening and repaying of Roswell Road further improvements may be expected. We can offer for sale a tract having about 500-foot frontage on Piedmont Road in the vicinity of Roswell Road at $20 a front foot. This is less than the prevailing price of frontage in high-class home sections, and the particular tract is suitable either for one home or for subdivision.
